The Council's move to establish divisional home nursing voluntary committees appears to date from June 1948. These committees were based on the areas covered by the nine health divisions of the London County Council. Membership of each of the nine committees comprised two direct representatives of home nursing associations and one representative nominated by each of the following: local medical committees, the Royal College of Midwives, the Royal College of Nursing, the British Red Cross Society, the Order of St John of Jerusalem, the Institute of Almoners and the London Association of Home Nursing Superintendents. The aim of the voluntary committees was to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - promote co-operation and good practice among professional bodies involved with the provision of medical care within the nine London health divisions - provide a direct link between the Central Council for District Nursing and the nine London County Council Divisional Health Committees and to - encourage local recruitment of nursing staff. The voluntary committees also provided a means to appoint members of home nursing associations to the Central Council and to the London County Council Divisional Health Committees. The four home nursing associations which comprised Voluntary Committee No. 5 were:	1948-1968
